Scoop the Poop

Dog Waste Hurts our Waterways

76 million dogs create 20.8 trillion pounds of poop per year. This waste is responsible for the spread of bacteria and parasites that threaten the health of other dogs, humans, and waterways.

- There are an estimated 76 million dogs in the United States that produce approximately 20.8 trillion pounds of waste each year. Dog waste is responsible for the spread of tapeworm, roundworm, E. coli and much more among dogs, while also posing a tremendous threat to human health. Do your part, scoop the poop year round in your backyard and while on walks! Viruses, parasites, and bacteria are threats to water quality, and they do not stay within property boundaries.
